

Case Study | Transition to Managed eDiscovery in Labour Litigation

for an Ontario Law Firm

Executive Summary

The client received a disclosure package from opposing counsel in electronic format but was not equipped to effectively manage it. With discoveries pending, noticia provided review software, loaded the documents, trained the client's legal team, and assisted with the review process. The review was completed quickly, discoveries conducted electronically, and the tools & knowledge acquired by the client have been incorporated into their practice.

Challenges

Before retaining noticia, the client was printing documents for traditional review, missing the opportunity to use metadata analysis and technology-assisted review (TAR) methods. Not only was this increasing the time required to review documents, but also driving up costs.

The client had over 40 years of experience in cases like this but did not have the tools necessary to fully manage the data sent by the opposing counsel. Like so many firms, what they needed was a partner with the software and technical knowledge to assist them in their transition to electronic evidence review.

Electronic Benefits

Electronic evidence has significant advantages over paper documents in the legal review process.
